Middle School World History – SS1105

This course will provide students an opportunity to learn the diverse history that has shaped our world. It begins by exploring the earliest human civilizations and the rise of ancient empires and continues to the 21st Century. Students will investigate the development of Medieval societies, the flourishing movements of the Renaissance and the Reformation, and the progress made during different periods of revolution, industrialization, urbanization, and reform. At the end of the course, students will be able to analyze the contributions of political conflicts and social issues to the continuing development and interdependence among nations in our modern world. This two-semester middle school course aligns to the National Social Studies standards and specifically addresses performance objectives focused on history, government, economics, geography, culture, and social studies skills.

Middle School U.S. History – SS1106

This two-semester course for middle school students provides students with a comprehensive overview of American history, from pre-history to the present day. Students will learn about the rich and diverse history of America's native peoples, early European colonization and settlement in America, and the creation of a new nation through the American Revolution and the founding documents that endure to this day. They will experience the development and expansion of a young nation and travel with her people through the trials of civil war. In this course, students will examine the major changes brought about by the nation's Reconstruction, industrialization, urbanization, and progressive reforms. They will closely examine the events and implications of the two World Wars and a worldwide economic depression. Students will have the opportunity to consider post-war America, including the struggle for global influence during the Cold War and the turbulent times of the Civil Rights Movement and the Vietnam era. Students will be presented with a look at modern America coming into her own as a global power and have the opportunity to think carefully about the challenges and opportunities facing the United States in the 21st Century. This course is strictly aligned to state and national standards.
